Activist, writer, scholar. Since Tiananmen Square protests and massacre in 1989, he hasn't stopped criticising politics, focusing on people's activist actions, calling for the rehabilitation of Tiananmen Square protests and a democratic, constitutional reform. Thus he was constantly under special surveillance by the state. Liu was one of the key members behind the Charter 08, a manifesto emphasising on values such as freedom, human rights, equality, the public sphere, democracy and constitutionalism, and calling for a radical reform of the Chinese state. In 2009, Liu was arrested for calling for subversion of the state and sentenced for 11 years. He received international support and was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize during his detention. He died from cancer in 2017.
